

I strongly encourage you not to relax the rules restricting the percentage of the broadcast media that any one corporation can own. There is already far too little diversity in the worldview propagated by the corporate media, and allowing more consolidation would only hurt the problem. If your goal is to represent the public interests of Americans, rather than the private interests of wealthy corporations, you ought not relax the rules.